

Cynthia Bringle working in the clay studio in 2007

CYNTHIA BRINGLE

Sometimes a workshop at Haystack can be a catalyst for students to continue their education. Studio potter Cynthia Bringle first came to Haystack as a scholarship student while she was enrolled at the Memphis Academy of Art. Her experience at Haystack-- and conversations that she had with teachers and fellow students-- led her to graduate school at the New York State College of Ceramics at Alfred University, one of the nation's leading programs. Since that time, Bringle has gone on to establish a successful career as a studio potter in North Carolina. She has been a frequent teacher at Haystack and other summer programs.